7 Usage Detail

Wondering how much gas you used in the billing period? Your usage has been calculated by taking the difference between the beginning and ending meter reads and multiplying that by the meter factor. Then multiply this amount by the therm factor to get your usage.

This section also displays information about the meter, including: meter number, usage period and dates, meter reads, type of reads, meter factor, therm factor, and usage.

9 Current Charges - explained

SEMCO Cost of Gas/Supplier Energy Charge

This is the cost of gas purchased from natural gas suppliers or the cost of the natural gas supplied by an alternative gas supplier. SEMCO cost of gas is a direct pass through. SEMCO does not profit on the sale of gas.

Customer, MRP, IRIP and Distribution Charge

These fixed and volumetric monthly charges are for maintaining the meter, pressure regulator, service lines, billing, and maintaining the distribution system.

Balancing Demand Charge

This is the cost of balancing customer consumption with actual gas deliveries and the cost associated with pipeline capacity.

Unregulated Charges

Includes charges such as appliance coverage. Failure to pay for unregulated services may result in termination of the coverage, but not in the discontinuance of gas service. Partial payments are credited first to any outstanding gas balance.
